New from Mexico

I've added some great specimens in a new Mexico Update \(click here\). This update includes some new fluorapatite crystals from the classic locality, Cerro de Mercado. Although Cerro de Mercado has produced specimens for many years, this group includes some exceptionally fine specimens - very high quality, some with amazing clarity and glassy lustre. Great to see these, given the calibre and ubiquitous damage we normally see. I acquired them from a seller who lives beside the mine. These specimens came out of the mine this year.

Also in this update are a small number of fine Ojuela Mine wulfenite specimens, most accompanied by mimetite. One of these specimens is particularly fascinating - elongated wulfenites with very dark central "bands" that are actually mimetite-coated original tabular wulfenites (I took several photos of this so you could see what I mean - it's cool!) The other wulfenite specimens include various crystal habits, including very fine tabular yellow crystals.

Finally I added a cute Milpillas azurite miniature.

For all new specimens at McDougall Minerals, see New Specimens.
